IDEAS FOR HOME BUILDERS BY WM. A. RADFORD.

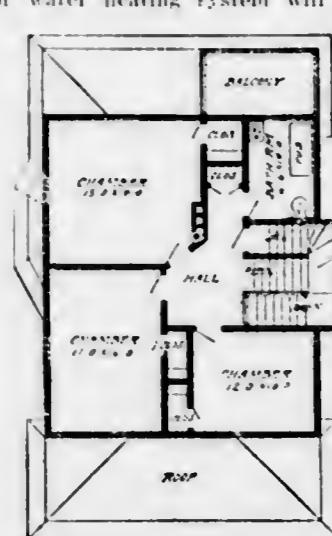

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice. FREE OF COST on all subjects relating to the sport of building for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 13 West Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

The most economical house to build and to occupy afterward is nearly square, of medium size, till two stories in height, with a good, deep cellar and an attic big enough to act as a buffer against heat in summer and cold in winter. Such houses give more room according to the size of the foundation and roof than any other design.

The house here illustrated is typical of this style. It is 31 feet wide by 35 feet from front to rear proportions that work to good advantage. There are certain geometrical combinations that work to a disadvantage in a square house, but are easily overcome when you add a few feet to the length.

One of the difficulties is the stairway, which interferes with the proper laying-out of the rooms in every short house. Stairways in dwelling houses have caused more gray hairs, and sent more architects to early graves, than any other feature in house building. There was a time when a rough ladder fastened with an ax answered the purpose. It was made with the trunks of two trees for sides, and sections of smaller trees for rounds. There was a hole through the upper floor and usually an effort was made to place the opening where the roof was high enough so you could miss hitting the knots on the rafters with your head. From that time to this, stairways have grown in complexity until we think we have them about perfect.

These are some of the practical more, the difference depending largely on the kind of radiators and the extra attachments; probably $250 would be the minimum, and $400 would be rather extravagant. The hot water plant will use a little less coal, because hot water is a better medium through which to convey heat. While no accurate estimate can be given without figuring the actual amount of heating surface and cubic air space, on general principles it may be said that, taking five years together, the cost of one system is about the same as the other.

These are some of the practical landings. The projection also offers an excuse to work in four windows for light and for general effect. The lighting of a modern stairway is another recent improvement on what that former generations were familiar with.

This arrangement is a combination affair going up from the kitchen and from the front hall, and down from the kitchen to the cellar. On the second floor going up to the attic and down stairs is equally good. The stair way looks well, and it is very convenient and satisfactory.

A house built in this manner has another advantage, and that is in heating. It is so compact that from one to five tons of coal per year may be saved, as compared with the amount required in some old-fashioned, loose-jointed houses that are no more roomy and offer no more accommodation. Under this house is a splendid cellar that is as light as some of the best rooms in houses built a dozen years ago, when small, narrow windows were in fashion. In a basement like this you can place a modern heating apparatus that will take care of the temperature in the coldest weather; and the attention required will not worry a person more than a few minutes twice a day.

PREPARATION OF A SEED BED

Illustration Shows Implement for Mowing Surface and Also for Smoothing Roads.

An implement which may be used to mow the surface is made by taking four pieces of seasoned hard wood, each six by six inches, and eight feet long; bolt together so that the corners, or edges, will rest on the ground, with three eye-bolts of three-quarter-inch round iron, about 32 inches long, one through the middle of the drag, the others each six inches from either end of the timbers. Use angle washers with holes for openings of bolts, clip out half-inch edge of the top inside pieces back of end bolt, for chain hook in transportation from place to place, as shown in Fig. 1.

For use as road smoother, drop back right-hand end of drag with about 2½ feet of wagon stay-chain, as in Fig. 2.

After plowing in the earlier portion of the day, transfer the teams to the combination drag-cultivator, pulling the six abreast with ordinary cultivators as shown in Fig. 3.

Caution on Pasturing Alfalfa.

Alfalfa should be pastured with very great caution. In fact, the farmer who holds this matchless crop in proper regard will pasture something else and just use the alfalfa for hay. But if the alfalfa is to be pastured about half enough stock should be kept on it to keep the growth down. By this method two or three cuttings of hay will be obtained in addition to the pasture.

Another caution to throw out is that I should be allowed to make a good start in the spring before the stock are turned on, and should be allowed to go in the winter with a good cover. Under no conditions should it be pastured in cold weather.

Buying Supplementary Feeds.

The farmer who has an abundance of corn and no other grain will find greatly to his profit if he will set aside a part of his corn and buy other feeds to furnish a variety of rations for the animals, as their systems thus would be supplied with all the essentials necessary to proper growth and development, and yet not require so much feed.

Good Roads & Farm Notes

A liberal use of paint means a great deal to the farmer.

Sharpen and repair the garden tools or next season's use.

The successful gardener is started in the fall, although not a seed may be planted.

Keep all the tools that are used around the barn to convenient and safe places.

A little paint goes a long ways toward making a home out of a group of buildings.

How much does it cost to have machinery standing out in the weather? Shredding is cheap.

While planting your garden give the attention to the color of the flowers so that they may harmonize.

Many a new and valuable implement is left out all winter more through carelessness than anything else.

Tobacco dust worked into the surface of the soil just before setting the vines will help to keep the aphids away.

These days can be put to good use in getting the garden into very nice shape and sharpening up things generally.

Ashes are best applied in the spring, separately or in connection with phosphate fertilizers as a top dressing.

Cabbage is one of the easiest vegetables to start from seed and to transplant, and to be made to grow in the garden or field.

ACCORDING to a recent publication of the Bureau of Education, the best paid head of any state aided institution of higher education in the United States is the President of the University of California, who receives $12,000 a year and a house. The presidents of Illinois and Cornell universities each receives $10,000 a year and a house, while the president of the University of Minnesota gets $10,000 without a house. The lowest salary paid the head of one of these institutions is $2,400. The salaries of faculty members range from $50 a year for the least paid tutor to $6,000 a year for the best-paid full professor.

RECENTLY George W. Beatty made two circuits of the Nassau Boulevard, Long Island, aerodrome in his Frontier-engined Wright bi plane carrying five passengers. The total live load lift amounted to 845 pounds. One man sat in the passenger's seat and held another in his lap, while the three others lay prone across the lower plane. Beatty got off the ground in a couple of hundred feet and rose to a height of 150 feet during one round of the course. The above is the greatest dead weight carried by an aeroplane in the United States, besides being a record.

Old Vets and Friends Have Good Time.

Co. H, of the 11th. Ky. Vol. Inf't. held its semi annual reunion at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Smith, near Paradise, last Saturday. This company has heretofore met at the home of one of its members, and its reunions were attended by many of the old veterans who are members of other companies, Federal and confederate. At their last reunion they were the guests of a member of Co. G. 11th. Ky. Inf't. The meeting was a grand success in every respect. Besides fourteen old Federal soldiers and one Confederate veteran there were present about eighty other guests, including the Rockport corner band. An elaborate dinner and supper were served to the crowd. Speeches were delivered by L. Reid, H. C. McCracken, Otto A. Rother and L. D. Griggs.

All the old Federal soldiers present had served under Gen. Don Carlos Buell during the beginning of the war, and those who were able to do so walked over Airdrie Hill, v.d. the ruins of the Buell home and also visited the ruins of the Airdrie furnace. Every old veteran present declared this was the most interesting reunion ever held in the county.

The four members of Co. H. present were: H. C. McCracken, John Coombs, J. N. Durall and W. M. Lewis. The other old Federal soldiers were; G. W. Allen, Sam Robertson, D. E. Grant, R. W. Casebier, R. J. Dobbs and Wm. H. Smith, of the 11th. Ky. Inf't.; E. C. Shull, 26th. Ky. Inf't.; M. Mason, 35th. Ky. Inf't.; John L. Thompson, 2nd. Ill. Cav.; L. D. Griggs, 25th. Ind. Inf't. The Confederate veteran present was L. Reid, who was a member of Co. C. 9th. Ky. Inf't.

The next reunion will take place the first Saturday in October at the home of one of the members of Co. H. as heretofore, all old soldiers will be welcome.

A Clean Man

Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

prevents these diseases. It makes a man's insides clean and healthy. It cleans the digestive organs, makes pure, clean blood, and clean, healthy flesh.

It restores tone to the nervous system, and cures nervous exhaustion and prostration. It contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs.

Constipation is the most unclean uncleanness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pill lets cure it. They never gripe. Easy to take as candy.

I. M. C. A. NOTES.

Do not forget the dates of the big membership campaign May 23, 24, 25.

Below are given some of the I. M. C. A. privileges of which every man and boy should avail himself: There are departments to develop the four fold nature of man—mental, physical, social and spiritual. In the reading table is to be found all the leading weekly and monthly magazines, county papers and a Louisville daily, and there is an excellent library which is growing. In the gymnasium is to be found all the most modern equipment for the physical development under proper instruction, and in the basement the lavatory and shower baths. These baths are conceded to be the best kind of baths, far superior to a tub bath, and are being installed almost exclusively. In the game or social room there are several good games, and there are to be additions as soon as the growth in membership permits. In the religious department the work for the last year will show its part in the work. Men's gospel meetings attendance 435, men's and boys' bible classes attendance 635, week of prayer attendance 99, seven meetings held in the jail attendance 298, making a total attendance at all religious meetings 1521, besides the Christian influence in and around the building day by day.

All these privileges cost but very little compared with the amount you receive, and every citizen should consider it a privilege to help in the work of this institution.

Court Review.

Judge Sandidge closed his spring term of court last week near the closing out of the month of April, having consumed nearly the entire month in disposing of a large docket. While sitting in the court room taking in the proceedings of the court our thoughts were carried back along the channel of circuit courts of the county, going back to the commencement of litigation in the first years of the nineteenth century. We summed up eighteen appointed and elected circuit judges who have held courts in the county. The first to be appointed were associated judges for the county. They were, William Bell and William Worthington. In 1804 Muhlenberg became part of a judicial district, joined with Henderson county. At that time Muhlenberg county comprehended part of McLean county, and Henderson that of Hopkins and Union. Judge Henry P. Broadnax was appointed circuit judge of the district, which office he held until 1819 when Benjamin Shakelford succeeded him. Judge Broadnax was a man of distinction in his day, considered an able jurist, as was also Judge Shakelford. Judge Shakelford was succeeded by Alcey McLean, a citizen of Greenville. The courts held by Broadnax, Shakelford and part of McLean's term were held in a log court house, consisting of three rooms, one in the lower story and two above, chinked and daubed with mud and lime, ceiled with split boards put on with pegs. This court house stood until about 1834, when a brick house was built and condemned and another brick house was built in 1835 which was received, in which Judge McLean finished his term as circuit judge, running from 1812 until his death, which occurred in the latter part of 1841. His successor was John Calhoun who continued until 1850, when Jessie W. Kincheloe was elected, being the first elected judge for the Muhlenberg judicial district. Kincheloe was succeeded by George B. Cook; he was elected in 1856 and died in less than a year afterwards. We think he held but a short term in Muhlenberg. Thomas C. Dabney became Cook's successor and filled out his term. Dabney's time expired during the commencement of the civil war. He was succeeded by R. T. Petree of Hopkinsville. Petree was elected August, 1862, and became the war judge. We know Cook and Dabney but were not so familiar with their courts as that of Petree. Petree was an able lawyer, and a nice, even tempered man and gave good satisfaction in his courts. He had the perils of war to contend with. We heard Petree relate an occurrence that took place at Princeton; at that time Muhlenberg and Caldwell counties were in the same judicial district. On one occasion while Petree was holding court at Princeton a company of Federal soldiers were stationed there, and on one day while his court was in full progress, a few days before adjournment, a lawyer was up making a rattling speech before a jury, a company of southern soldiers dashed into Princeton and a general engagement commenced near and about the court house. Petree said, all of a sudden they heard a great noise and bang, bang! and the rapid fire of guns, the rattling of balls against and in the court house. An abrupt and unceremonious adjournment took place at once. The jury, lawyers and witnesses scattered, ran and hid; the clerk and himself dashed into a little back room for shelter where he got up on a chair to look out a transom to see what was going on outside; and a moment after he got down a ball pierced through the transom at the very spot he was looking out and struck the opposite wall and soldiers commenced dashing in the court house, when he dashed out the back way and as soon as he could left for Hopkinsville and did not stop until he reached that place. In the skirmish there were several killed and wounded. Courts and court houses did not fare so well during the civil war. Petree was succeeded by George C. Rogers of Bowling Green, the judicial district having been changed. Rogers died after the lapse of about two years of his term. His term was filled out by R. C. Bowlin of Russellville, after which John E. Hulse was elected and soon afterwards resigned. R. C. Bowlin filled out his term. Judge John R. Grace

The Red Marshes

Copyright, 1912, J. L. ROARK, Estate, Inc.

Beyond the red marshes lies the sea, in the grass Nov. after days of rain a tumbling sea, with the waves topped with white foam, and crashing in heavily through the rusty marsh grass.

But it was at low tide that Marta's little dory slipped down the river pathway of the streams that cut their way through the marshes.

Sometimes she met Slim Gregory coming back with lobsters from the early morning catch, and Slim would shake his black hat, and would ask in his surly way, "What good things are you taking to come down this morning, Marta?" and Marta would pipe up with her clear note, "It's tried claws."

For Marta's father worked on the new causeway, helping with his labor to make a permanent way to the rocky promontory which was cut off from the mainland at high tide.

Slim Gregory, or as the people of the town called him "Black Gregory," did not work on the causeway. He preferred the free method of earning his living in the sea. He sold his lobsters to the summer hotels, and in winter sent them to the city. Slim cared little for money. Perhaps that was the reason he had the name of being peculiar.

It was because Marta carried her father's dinner down the silver highway that Slim Gregory came through the marshes with his morning's catch rather than land at the docks in deeper water.

Slim loved Marta. Every day he brought her some offering from the sea. Sometimes Marta refused the gifts. "I can't take them," she said to Slim, one morning, as he held out to her a pair of shining mussels.

"Why not?"

Marta looked away from him as she answered. "Mother says it isn't right. She wants—she wants me to marry Edward Paul, Slim."

Slim leaned far over and drew her close to his own with a strong hand.

"Marta," he said, with a sharp intake of his breath, "Marta, are you going to marry him?"

She shook her head. "No, no, I don't love him, but mother has set her heart on it."

"Why does she want to—sell—on?"

Marta raised her head quickly. "Don't you speak of it that way. Mother doesn't realize—only thin's that Edward is profligate."

That night the wind blew away the fog, but it also blew itself into a strong gale, which increased as the day advanced, until, at sunset, sky and water showed the blackness of a storm.

It was not until midnight, however, that the people of the town began to be afraid. Then it was learned that a half dozen of the boats that had gone out early in the morning had not come back. The men from the life-saving station were on the water, and fire and water showed the blackness of a storm.

Up and down the beach went the people whose sons and husbands and fathers were at sea. Mother went for their boys, children for their parents.

Not nobody wept for Slim. Only Marta, straining her eyes through the blackness, prayed that he might be safe; that he might come back to her.

A shout went up, as somewhere, out in the lapping blackness, there glowed a light like a star. The lifeboat, working its way against wind and wave, brought back five men.

"Everybody is safe," said some one near Marta.

Marta, searching the bearded faces, asked, "Did you—did you find Slim Gregory?"

"We saw him just as the storm broke," said one of the men. "We shouted, but he was too far away to hear us—we haven't seen him since."

All night long the life guards patrolled the beach. All night long Marta strained her eyes out to sea. When dawn came the wind died, and the sun came up, rosy red above the horizon. And as it rose it showed far out on the teeming waters a black speck.

"It's a boat!" said Marta.

"And there's a man in it. It's Slim," said one of the guards.

Then Marta fled homeward to hear the reproaches of her mother.

It was nearly noon when Marta awoke across the red marshes with her father's lunch.

When she met Slim Gregory she dared not look up.

"Marta," he called, and brought his boat close to hers and his voice was eager as he spoke, "they told me, on the beach, that you waited all night for news of me."

She answered him as she had answered her mother, "Surely a man has right to have one heart cry out for him when he's at the mercy of the wind and waves."

"Did your heart cry, Marta?"

In spite of her self-consciousness, she told him the truth. "If you had died my heart would have died with you, Slim."

No one could have called him "Black Gregory" if they could have seen him at that moment. The face was melted into tenderness.

"I think I came back because you called me, Marta," he said. "There was one moment when in the darkness I lost hope but something caused to urge Marta's wailing, and so—I came."
